County Agencies Celebrate GIS Day Event

Several county agencies, along with the County Auditor's Office and Lucas County Information Services, celebrated National Geographic Information Systems \(GIS\) Day 2005, on November 16th. The event consisted of a map gallery and several presentations demonstrating how each agency has utilized this powerful technology. Along with participating agencies, Lucas County provided an opportunity for those curious about GIS to see its applications in action.

This was the Auditor's seventh GIS Day celebration. See how the Auditor's office has celebrated GIS Day in the past by clicking here. Raising awareness about GIS is key in improving inter-agency cooperation and in the utilization of resources.

Map Gallery

GIS Day participants attend the map gallery and presentations.

An extensive map gallery with agency maps representing the Auditor, Board of Election, Dog Warden, Domestic Violence Task Force, Emergency Management Agency, Emergency Medical Services, E-911, Engineer, Family Council, Sanitary Engineer, and Sheriff were showcased. Recognition of GIS Staff

From left to right: Keith Fournier, Geographic Information Officer, Director of Lucas County's Information Services, and himself a certified GIS Professional, congratulated Robert Crawford, Randall Schardt, Scott Yoder, Patricia Lankey, and Leslie Rhegness on their recent certifications as GIS Professionals (GISP) by the GIS Certification Institute \(GISCI\). Lucas County is third in the country, behind Mecklenburg County, NC and Prince William County, VA, with the largest number of certified GISP's.

Director of Real Estate, Jerry German also credited Keith Fournier and Robert Crawford for their certifications as Cadastral Mapping Specialists.
