GIS Analysts are in the Top 10 Low Stress Jobs and Top 100 Best Jobs in America, according to Money Magazine and Payscale.com, as seen at CNN.com:

http://money.cnn.com/magazines/moneymag/bestjobs/2010/qualitylife/index.html

David DiBiase, President of GISCI says: "On behalf of the nearly 5,000 GIS Professionals certified by the GIS Certification Institute (GISCI), I applaud Money magazine and Payscale.com for including Geographic Information Systems Analyst in their list of the 100 'best careers.' The U.S. Department of Labor recently estimated that the geospatial industry will need nearly 150,000 additional GIS professionals over the next ten years. GISCI's certification criteria provide a sound professional development strategy for current practitioners, as well as those who aspire to this challenging, rewarding, and meaningful career path."