The New Jersey Pine Lands are a unique fire dependent ecosystem for the state. It is a great natural resource and it is full of history and legend. The Jersey Devil is believed to live in the region and the Pirate Blackbird supposedly buried his treasure in the region.

This map shows how much of the pineland has changed from 2006 to 2011 using the Nation Land Cover Dataset. In total 146.7 Hectares of Evergreen Forest were lost and 6.9 Hectares of Evergreen Forest were gained during this time period.